

We are looking through a classroom window into an empty classroom, it is daytime. The camera pans around the room and finally finds a boy in uniform crouched on the floor at the back of the room, head in his hands.

We see a corridor and the same boy is walking down the corridor a boy in a red hoodie walks past him and knocks into him on purpose. The boy in uniform looks after him with a fed up expression.

We cut to later on a footbridge over the railway. The boy in uniform is walking home and behind him leaning against the wall is the hooded boy on a bicycle he is doing something with his phone. The boy in blue reaches into his pocket unaware of the guy on the bicycle. He has received a text from him saying 'Look behind you, freak of nature'. He turns around and the boy on the bike cycles away. The uniformed boy gives chase but the bicycle is too fast to catch.

He is out of breath . We cut to the school again and see the uniformed boy in a lonely corridor, he is struggling with his thoughts. We see him knock on an office door and see an teacher invite him in. They talk and then we cut to outside the school building where the teacher is talking to the boy in the red hoodie. They go inside together and we are back in the office where all three are having a meeting together. The boy in the red hoodie is clearly embarrassed as he listens to the boy in uniform talking with the teacher mediating. The screen blacks out and the words 'tell someone' appear.
